1:00 p.m. Treats from the Edwardian Country House (CC)
 Hugh Fearnley-Whittingstall shows off the finer things in life that Edwardians enjoyed. Flowers were grown throughout the year on country estates – at great expense. The most popular scents of the time, and how perfumes were made. A restored apothecary in Yorkshire shows how flowers were used for many applications.

1:30 p.m. Treats from the Edwardian Country House (CC)
 Everyday life in Edwardian estates included large and frequent meals. Hugh Fearnley-Whittingstall indulges in breakfast, lunch, and a proper five o'clock tea. He gets the full treatment at an authentic barber shop dating back to the period and visits a beekeeper to see how honey and beeswax were harvested.

2:00 p.m. Treats from the Edwardian Country House (CC)
 The socially conscious upper classes took entertaining very seriously. Hugh suggests three courses for a dinner party, and a wine merchant talks about an appropriate wine for each. Hugh attempts a proper table setting. Floral arrangements are very important, and ice sculptures had practical as well as decorative purposes.

2:30 p.m. Treats from the Edwardian Country House (CC)
 Kitchen gardens and greenhouses impressed guests with fruits and vegetables grown out of season. Hugh visits a garden at a Sussex estate and shows some classic desserts made from fruits and berries.

3:00 p.m. Treats from the Edwardian Country House (CC)
 Herbs and other plants were used for cooking and as natural medicines. Hugh visits a garden that specializes in natural remedies and tries a selection of tonics and tinctures. He also samples their culinary uses.

3:30 p.m. Treats from the Edwardian Country House (CC)
 Hugh organizes a formal picnic. Decoration and detail are paramount in both fashion and baked goods. He visits a shop that specializes in ribbon, lace, and other accessories. He takes some potted seafood for his picnic and plans some outdoor games and sports.
